Art Unit: 1755

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 1, 3-5, 7 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, because the specification, while being enabling for methods and coating materials wherein the material is a sol-gel material which includes at least one of a hydrolysate and a polycondensate of the complex oxide, does not reasonably provide enablement for stirring any complex oxide including material in the presence of a platinum group element. The specification does not enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to practice the invention commensurate in scope with these claims. The instant specification explicitly describes the catalyst containing platinum group elements as promoting the alcohol exchange. The sole example in the specification exemplifies the invention wherein a PZT sol-gel mixture is treated with platinum. The only remaining indication in the application that complex oxides in the presence of platinum group catalysts may exhibit the basic and novel characteristics of the invention, the excellent film characteristics as represented by the improved hysteresis loop, is found at page 3, lines 8-10. This passage expands the enablement by providing a reasoned theory why certain materials would exhibit the improved properties. The reasoning therein is limited to the usefulness treating sol-gel complex oxide materials with platinum group catalysts.

Claims 2 and 6 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims. The prior art of record fails to teach or suggest the improved hysteresis loop observed in films formed by stirring a complex metal oxide sol-gel material in the presence of a catalyst containing platinum group elements. Prior art references fail to teach using complex metal oxides and/or employ catalysts only in forms useful to catalyze other reactions such as crosslinking silsequioxane resins.
